

Lepidoptera of Ojibway Prairie Complex

Butterflies and moths belong to the insect order Lepidoptera. Here is a draft list of 647 species recorded in the Ojibway Prairie Complex in Windsor, Ontario as of February 2022.

This checklist was first compiled by former City of Windsor Naturalist, Paul Pratt. Previously the checklist was heavily focused on butterflies however with the aid of citizen science project, iNaturalist, the Lepidoptera of Ojibway Checklist has been revised to include a comprehensive list of moths. The species records that were obtained from iNaturalist are “Research Grade” with photographic evidence to support the observation.

For information on other insects found within Ojibway Prairie Complex please visit Ojibway’s insect web page. Entomologists from the University of Guelph have been actively surveying Ojibway's insect population in recent years and they have created a preliminary list of over 2,000 species on their web site called The Insects of Ojibway Prairie.

The following are contributors to this checklist: David Beadle, Maurice Bottos, Mark Nenadov, Geoff Pekor, John E. Pilkington, Paul D. Pratt, Tom Preney, and Josh Vandermeulen.
